Introduction to Theology 1998 a selection of readings from the bible and church tradition for use in the initial undergraduate course dept of theology marquette university

Lectures in Systematic Theology 1979 oxford berlin and chicago were extraordinarily dynamic centres of theology during the nineteenth and early twentieth centuries however significant differences in the political climate and culture of each location bred strikingly divergent theological approaches in the universities of each city mark chapman offers a highly original exploration of the subjection of their theologies to the changes and developments of educational policy and national and international politics shedding light upon the constraints that such external factors have imposed upon the evolution of the discipline chapman highlights the efforts of theologians and churchmen to relate the true core of christianity a lived religion free of shibboleths to their rapidly changing world the opinions of conservative and liberal theologians are skilfully balanced to reveal the problems of critical history of political authority of increasing global awareness and of the need for social amelioration which profoundly shaped the ways in which theology was conceived during the period new ground has been broken in this inter disciplinary study of the social political and ecclesiastical contexts of western theology this book will be invaluable to any reader interested in the use of theology as part of the wider quest for social integration and meaning in an increasingly fragmented society

Theology and Society in Three Cities 2014-10-30 the purpose of this volume is to offer an authoritative overview of the positive relationship between faith and reason the latter understood as different mode of philosophy it will also show that despite important variations and differences the manner in which christian faith is able to interact with other intellectual disciplines is grounded in theology and is required by theology finally it will ground the overall project of religion and the university firmly in different ecclesial communities within the christian family and differing theological philosophical orientations that might be trans denominational keeping with classical christology he explores perichoresis or interpenetration with reference to both the incarnation and trinity over two chapters crisp deals with the human nature of christ and then provides an argument against the view common amongst some contemporary theologians that christ had a fallen human nature he considers the notion of divine kenosis or self emptying and discusses non incarnational christology focusing on the work of john hick this view denies christ is god incarnate regarding him as primarily a moral exemplar to be imitated crisp rejects this alternative account of the nature of christology

Divinity and Humanity 2007-02-15 why has the reality of other religions become a big problem for christianity in the past christianity has been able to largely ignore other religions but in recent decades not just the reality but the vitality of other religions has become a challenge this accessible book tackles a number of questions arising from these changes is belonging to one religion rather than another merely a matter of cultural preference is salvation the same among all religions and what can be learned from other religions considering wider issues of how modernity has defined religion gavin d costa provides a substantial critique of secular ways of controlling religions and shows how christianity is very well suited to deal with religious plurality at the doctrinal and social level the book makes a decisive contribution to debates about the clash between islam and the west arguing that the major threat to religious freedoms come from secularism and that islam and christianity both have the resources to develop a vibrant and pluralist public square informed by intellectual debate by engaging with the core questions and suggesting a pathway through the various answers that have been proposed in recent years this is an ideal introduction to the field and one which will help stimulate ideas and discussions

Baptized in the Spirit 2006 in order to adequately address the issues of atonement and christology we must understand how it is that we think about the relationship between god and the human being the way in which we understand and interpret the life and death of jesus and his role within that relationship then impacts our theology of the sacraments particularly the eucharist further the questions continue to confront and be confronted by my inescapable identity as a lutheran christian i use the term inescapable because i find myself working from and with theologies and theologians that are unabashedly critical of patriarchal religious doctrine and paternal theological construction yet i cannot be convinced that the tradition which formed me is irretrievable or irrelevant i am seeking to use luther as one of my sources but i am working to reinterpret him and offer a more adequate constructive alternative that embodies what is useable in his tradition i find the potential for a liberating message within christian theology and i find a critical theological resource in luther from the introduction

The Theology of Dietrich Bonhoeffer 1960 we don't need books about teaching so much as books that teach considering jesus himself taught in a variety of ways parable discussion miracle performance ritual observance it seems that there can be no single definitive christian method of teaching how then should christian teaching happen especially in this time of significant change to theological education as an institution mark jordan addresses this question by first allowing various depictions and instances of christian teaching from literature to speak for themselves before meditating on what these illustrative examples might mean for christian pedagogy each textual scene he shares is juxtaposed with a contrasting scene to capture the pluralistic possibilities in the art of teaching a faith that is so often rooted in paradox he exemplifies forms of teaching that operate beyond the boundaries of scholarly books and discursive lectures to disrupt the normative western academic approach of treating theology as a body of knowledge to be transmitted merely through language transforming fire consults writers ranging from gregory of nyssa to c s lewis and from john bunyan to octavia butler cutting across historical distance and boundaries of identity rather than offering solutions or systems jordan seeks in these texts new shelters for theological education where powerful teaching can happen and even as traditional institutions shrink or vanish the hearts of students can catch fire once again
