National Judges and the Case Law of the Court of Justice of the European Union

2021-01-14

l'impatto del diritto dell'unione europea sugli stati membri si concretizza in misura determinante tramite regole e principi dettati dalla Corte di Giustizia e destinati a essere applicati dai giudici nazionali. Il buon funzionamento del complesso sistema derivante dall'interazione tra l'ordinamento dell'unione e i singoli stati membri presuppone pertanto un rapporto costruttivo tra la Corte di Giustizia e le Corti nazionali. Muovendo da tale premessa, il volume affronta le problematiche inerenti al dialogo tra tutte le Corti nazionali di merito supreme costituzionali e la Corte di Giustizia. A tal fine sono stati chiamati a esprimersi prima di tutto gli stessi giudici che ne sono protagonisti. A questi ultimi è stato chiesto di illustrare a partire dalla propria esperienza le difficoltà di comunicazione in senso ampio riscontrate nel dialogo con la Corte di Giustizia. Alla voce dei giudici si aggiunge quindi quella dei professori specializzati nel diritto comparato ed europeo.

stereotypes sometimes lead us to make poor judgements of other people but they also have the potential to facilitate quick efficient and accurate judgements how can we discern whether any individual act of stereotyping will have the positive or negative effect how stereotypes deceive us addresses this question it identifies various factors that determine whether or not the application of a stereotype to an individual in a specific context will facilitate or impede correct judgements and perceptions of the individual it challenges the thought that stereotyping only and always impedes correct judgement when the stereotypes that are applied are inaccurate failing to reflect social realities it argues instead that stereotypes that reflect social realities can lead to misperceptions and misjudgements and that inaccurate but egalitarian social attitudes can therefore facilitate correct judgements and accurate perceptions the arguments presented in this book have important implications for those who might engage in stereotyping and those who are at risk of being stereotyped they have implications for those who work in healthcare and those who have mental health conditions how stereotypes deceive us provides a new conceptual framework evaluative dispositionalism that captures the epistemic faults of stereotypes and stereotyping providing conceptual resources that can be used to improve our own thinking by avoiding the pitfalls of stereotyping and to challenge other people s stereotyping where it is likely to lead to misperception and misjudgement governments play a crucial role in shaping societies enacting policies and making decisions that affect the lives of their citizens while many governments work with transparency and integrity there have been instances throughout history where deception and manipulation have been employed to achieve certain objectives it is important to acknowledge that not all governments engage in deceptive practices and this preface should not be interpreted as a blanket statement about all governing bodies instead it aims to shed light on some historical and potential methods governments could use to deceive their citizens governments may deceive their citizens through various means including

- 1 propaganda governments can use propaganda to control the narrative and shape public opinion they may disseminate biased information or misleading narratives through state controlled media censorship or manipulation of social media platforms to influence public perception
- 2 censorship and information control by controlling the flow of information governments can restrict access to certain facts or ideas that might challenge their authority or contradict their agenda this can be done through internet censorship media control or limiting academic freedoms
- 3 half truths and spin governments may present information selectively emphasizing certain aspects of an issue while downplaying or omitting others to manipulate public perception and opinion
- 4 false flags in some cases governments may orchestrate or allow incidents to occur to manipulate public sentiment or justify certain actions these false flag operations can create a sense of crisis and rally support for government actions that might otherwise be met with resistance 5 surveillance and privacy concerns governments may employ extensive surveillance measures often justified in the name of national security to monitor their citizens activities this can lead to concerns about privacy violations and potential misuse of collected data 6 corruption and bribery instances of corruption within the government can lead to dishonest decision making with policies influenced by personal gain rather than the best interests of the citizens 7 divide and conquer strategies governments might exploit existing societal divisions such as along ethnic religious or socio economic lines to maintain power by pitting different groups against each other 8 scapegoating governments may blame certain groups or individuals for societal problems to divert attention from their own shortcomings or to rally support for specific policies 9 manipulation of elections by tampering with electoral processes or engaging in voter suppression governments can influence election outcomes and maintain their hold on power 10 complex legislation and bureaucracy the use of complex legislation and bureaucratic processes can make it difficult for citizens to fully understand the implications of certain policies making it easier for governments to pass controversial measures without widespread public scrutiny it is essential for citizens to be vigilant and well informed questioning information sources and demanding transparency and accountability from their governments a robust civil society free press and active public engagement can act as safeguards against deception and misuse of power by those in authority a fresh perspective on statecraft in the cyber domain the idea of cyber war has played a dominant role in both academic and popular discourse concerning the nature of statecraft in the cyber domain however this lens of war and its expectations for death and destruction may distort rather than help clarify the nature of cyber competition and conflict are cyber activities actually more like an intelligence contest where both states and nonstate actors grapple for information advantage below the threshold of war in deter disrupt or deceive robert chesney and max smeets argue that reframing cyber competition as an intelligence contest will improve our ability to analyze and strategize about cyber events and policy the contributors to this volume debate the logics and implications of this reframing they examine this intelligence concept across several areas of cyber security policy and in different national contexts taken as a whole the chapters give rise to a unique dialogue illustrating areas of agreement and disagreement among leading experts and placing all of it in conversation with the larger fields of international relations and intelligence studies deter disrupt or deceive is a must read because it offers a new way for scholars practitioners and students to understand statecraft in the cyber domain
