I first mentioned the idea of an impact factor in science in 1955 with support from the National Institutes of Health. The experimental genetics citation index was published and that led to the 1961 publication of the Science Citation Index. Irving H. Sher and I created the Journal Impact Factor to help select additional source journals. The impact factor, or Journal Impact Factor (JIF), of an academic journal is a scientometric index calculated by Clarivate that reflects the yearly mean number of citations of articles published in the last two years in a given journal as indexed by Clarivate Science. The Journal Impact Factor (JIF) as calculated by Clarivate Analytics is a measure of the average number of times articles from a two-year time frame have been cited in a given year according to citations captured in the of Science database. The 2023 release of Journal Citation Reports extends the Journal Impact Factor (JIF) to all of Science Core Collection journals including those indexed in the Arts and Humanities Citation Index™ (AHCI) and the Multidisciplinary Emerging Sources Citation Index™ (ESCI). 2022 Journal Metrics on this page you will find a suite of citation-based metrics for Nature Portfolio journals produced by Clarivate Analytics. Health, May 12, 2020. What is the impact factor of a journal? by Tayler Sindhu, MD. Impact factors are a controversial yet widely used framework to measure a journal's influence. Here's a closer look at what impact factors are, how to find them, why they matter, and how to use them. What is the impact factor of a journal? Impact factor is a widely accepted method of evaluating the performance of academic journals. It measures the average number of citations per published paper received in a journal. To calculate the impact factor, the Thomson Reuters Journal Citation Reports are used since the publication of the first journal citation reports (JCR) in 1976. The Journal Impact Factor (JIF) has become a standard way to measure the citation impact of a journal. The following 192 journals have a JIF for the first time this year. If you have access to JCR through your institution's subscription, you can view a rich array of indicators to understand how each journal connects to the scholarly network. Go to Product. Seventeen Wiley journals are expecting to receive their first Journal Impact Factor in 2022. These titles have all been accepted into the of Science's Science Citation Index Expanded (SCIE) and are due to appear in the June 2022 release of the Journal Citation Report. A Journal Impact Factor is a metric that assesses the citation rate of articles published in a particular journal over a specific time that's usually 2 years.
