transformation should lie at the heart of our new approach to defense the development of transformational capabilities processes and force structures should be given strategic focus to meet the principal challenges under our defense strategy india is already ceased with the necessity of transformation albeit without any documented national security guidelines or operating instructions which are legislated or have the validation of at least the cabinet committee on security ccs in other words the first step would be to create a draft security strategy based on many assumptions like the foreign policy or the cumulative emerging threat scenario as appreciated by the defence intelligence agency dia this well researched book is a result of the project allotted by the usi under the field marshal k m cariappa chair the book is therefore more as an idea or a theoretical construct basically to bring in more clarity to the various options available for this great transformation of the indian military the author has deliberated upon various landmarks of transformation milestones achieved so far by the three services and given recommendations to further build upon ongoing modernization

the year 2011 marks the twentieth anniversary of the end of the soviet union this may be an appropriate time to evaluate the adoption by previously state socialist societies of other economic and political models the transition has sometimes been described in positive terms as a movement to free societies with open markets and democratic elections others have argued that the transition has created weak poverty stricken states with undeveloped civil societies ruled by unresponsive political elites which is the more accurate assessment david lane examines a few of the theoretical approaches that help explain the trajectory of change from socialism to capitalism he focuses on two main approaches in this volume elite theories and social class theories dwelling on the role of elites regard the transformation from socialism to capitalism as a type of system transfer in which elites craft democratic and market institutions into the space left by state socialism lane contrasts this interpretation with class based theories which consider transformation in terms of revolution and explain why such theories have not been considered the best way of framing the transition in the post socialist states while recognizing that elites can play important roles and have the capacity to transform societies lane contends that elite theories alone are inadequate to explain a system change that brings free markets in contrast he proposes a class approach in which two groups characterize state socialism an administrative class and an acquisition class this book is about the major organizational challenges related to the fourth industrial revolution 4ir and ways for visionary leaders to begin addressing them now by rethinking traditional views of change learning and leadership this is not another book about the gloom and doom associated with predicted job losses due to robots and artificial intelligence ai instead this is a solutions based book that provides a new way of thinking about the organization called story thinking the first industrial revolution was based on steam and mechanical production the second revolution was based on electricity and assembly lines the third revolution was based on computing and online workflow all three of these technological advancements completely changed the underlying approaches towards business but the next revolution will be even more profound the fourth revolution is primarily based on intelligence and digital connectivity this will move us beyond building a workforce around the technology the workforce will also be competing with the technology successful organizations will need to do more than just adopt smarter tools they will need to adopt smarter ways of thinking beyond current memorized prescriptive change models within the second industrial revolution we became accustomed to saying that everything happens within a process and the framework of process became our mental model of work now in the fourth industrial revolution we will need to understand that the framework of story must become our mental model of work storytelling is based on a sensemaking pattern for how we should talk but story thinking is based on this sensemaking pattern for how we should work
