recent decades have witnessed an enthusiastic retrieval of eudaimonism according to which the virtuous life is the happy life but the critique launched by kant that eudaimonism is egoistic and distorts the character of duty or obligation has persisted should i develop the virtues because these are the traits i need in order to flourish is it facts about my own happiness that determine my obligations to others in this book jennifer herdt deftly sifts through these debates showing why we should embrace ecstatic or goodness prior eudaimonism while rejecting welfare prior forms of eudaimonism grasping the character of ecstatic eudaimonism she argues has major implications overcoming the common assumption of a sharp break between pagan and christian eudaimonism as well as of a late medieval or protestant repudiation of eudaimonism in favor of divine command theory agents cannot rightly respond to the goods they encounter unless they respond to them precisely as good and not merely as a means to promoting their own welfare in responding well their agency is thereby necessarily perfected in conversation with vital strands of contemporary moral philosophy herdt goes on to articulate the distinctive character of obligation as a feature of accountability relations among agents assuming responsibility offers a fresh point of departure for theological and philosophical approaches to virtue ethics moral agency and the contested relationship between the good and the right the neoplatonists have a perfectionist view of freedom an entity is free to the extent that it succeeds in making itself good free entities are wholly in control of themselves they are self determining self constituting and self knowing neoplatonist philosophers argue that such freedom is only possible for non bodily things the human soul is free insofar as it rises above bodily things and engages in intellection but when it turns its desires to bodily things it is drawn under the sway of fate and becomes enslaved ursula coope discusses this notion of freedom and its relation to questions about responsibility she explains the important role of notions of self reflexivity in neoplatonist accounts of both freedom and responsibility in part i coope sets out the puzzles neoplatonist philosophers face about freedom and responsibility and explains how these puzzles arise from earlier discussions part ii explores the metaphysical underpinnings of the neoplatonist notion of freedom concentrating especially on the views of plotinus and proclus in what sense if any is the ultimate first principle of everything the one free if everything else is under this ultimate first principle how can anything other than the one be free what is the connection between freedom and nonbodiliness finally coope considers in part iii questions about responsibility arising from this perfectionist view of freedom why are human beings responsible for their behaviour in a way that other animals are not if we are enslaved when we act viciously how can we be to blame for our vicious actions and choices in this book an international group of philosophers economists and theologians focus on the relationship between justice luck and responsibility in health care together they offer a thorough reflection on questions such as how should we understand justice in health care why are health care interests so important that they deserve special protection how should we value health what are its functions and do these make it different from other goods furthermore how much equality should there be which inequalities in health and health care are unfair and which are simply unfortunate which matters of health care belong to the domain of justice and which to the domain of charity and to what extent should we allow personal responsibility to play a role in allocating health care services and resources or in distributing the costs with this book the editors meet a double objective first they provide a comprehensive philosophical framework for understanding the concepts of justice luck and responsibility in contemporary health care and secondly they explore whether these concepts have practical force to guide normative discussions in specific contexts of health care such as prevention of infectious diseases or in matters of reproductive technology particular and extensive attention is paid to issues regarding end of life care this book presents a conceptual mapping of supererogation in the analytic moral philosophical tradition it first asks whether supererogation can be conceptualised in the absence of obligation or duty and then makes the case that it can be it does so by enlisting the resources of the continental tradition specifically using the work of emmanuel levinas and his notion of infinite responsibility in so doing the book contributes to the ongoing efforts to create a common ethical terminology between the analytic and continental traditions within moral philosophy supererogatory actions are praiseworthy actions that go beyond duty and yet are not blameworthy when not performed in responding to this paradox moral philosophy either brackets or attempts a reductionism of supererogation supererogation is epitomised in the paradigmatic figures of the saint and hero yet most would agree that emulating these figures is too morally demanding we rightly ask where does moral obligation end is it even possible or desirable to demarcate such a boundary besides the important theoretical issues these questions raise they also speak to practical ethical dilemmas in the contemporary milieu as they concern the global wealthy s responsibility to the poor and the challenges of development aid work it has long been established that the crisis of 1066 generated a florescence of historical writing in the first half of the twelfth century emily a winkler presents a new perspective on previously unqueried matters investigating how historians individual motivations and assumptions produced changes in the kind of history written across the conquest she argues that responses to the danish conquest of 1016 and the norman conquest of 1066 changed dramatically within two generations of the latter conquest repeated conquest could signal repeated failures and sin across the orders of society yet early twelfth century historians in england not only extract english kings and people from a history of failure but also establish english kingship as a worthy office on a european scale royal responsibility in anglo norman historical writing illuminates the consistent historical agendas of four historians william of malmesbury henry of huntingdon john of worcester and geffrei gaimar in their narratives of england s eleventh century history these twelfth century historians expanded their approach to historical explanation to include individual responsibility and accountability within a framework of providential history in this regard they made substantial departures from their sources these historians share a view of royal responsibility independent both of their sources primarily the anglo saxon chronicle and of any political agenda that placed english and norman allegiances in opposition although the accounts diverge widely in the interpretation of character all four are concerned more with the effectiveness of england s kings than with the legitimacy of their origins their new shared view of royal responsibility represents a distinct phenomenon in england s twelfth century historiography
