silent film adaptations of novels by british and american women writers 1903 1929 focuses on fifty three silent film adaptations of the novels of acclaimed authors george eliot charlotte brontë emily brontë mary shelley louisa may alcott harriet becher stowe willa cather and edith wharton many of the films are unknown or dismissed and most of them are degraded destroyed or lost burned in warehouse fires spontaneously combusted in storage cans or quietly turned to dust their content and production and distribution details are reconstructed through archival resources as individual narratives that when considered collectively constitute a broader narrative of lost knowledge a fragmented and buried early twentieth century story now reclaimed and retold for the first time to a twenty first century audience this collective narrative also demonstrates the extent to which the adaptations are intertextually and ideologically entangled with concurrently released early woman s films to re promote and re instill the norm of idealized white married domesticated womanhood during a time of extraordinary cultural change for women retelling this lost narrative also allows for a reassessment of the place and function of the adaptations in the development of the silent film industry and as cinematic precedent for the hundreds of sound adaptations of the literary texts of these eight women writers produced from 1931 to the 2020s

the last word argues that the hollywood novel opened up space for cultural critique of the film industry at a time when the industry lacked the capacity to critique itself while the young studio system worked tirelessly to burnish its public image in the wake of celebrity scandal several industry insiders wrote fiction to fill in what newspapers and fan magazines left out throughout the 1920s and 1930s these novels aimed to expose the invisible machinery of classical hollywood cinema including not only the evolving artifice of the screen but also the promotional discourse that complemented it as likeminded filmmakers in the 1940s and 1950s gradually brought the dark side of the industry to the screen however the hollywood novel found itself struggling to live up to its original promise of delivering the unfilmable by the 1960s desperate to remain relevant the genre had devolved into little more than erotic fantasy of movie stars behind closed doors perhaps the only thing the public couldn't already find elsewhere still given their unique ability to speak beyond the institutional restraints of their time these earlier works offer a window into the industry's dynamic creation and re-creation of itself in the public imagination in 1995 and 1996 six film or television adaptations of jane austen's novels were produced an unprecedented number more amazing all were critical and/or box office successes what accounts for this explosion of interest much of the appeal of these films lies in our nostalgic desire at the end of the millennium for an age of greater politeness and sexual reticence austen's ridicule of deceit and pretentiousness also appeals to our fin de siècle sensibilities the novels were changed however to enhance their appeal to a wide popular audience and the revisions reveal much about our own culture and its values these recent productions espouse explicitly twentieth century feminist notions and reshape the austenian hero to make him conform to modern expectations linda troost and sayre greenfield present fourteen essays examining the phenomenon of jane austen as cultural icon providing thoughtful and sympathetic insights on the films through a variety of critical approaches the contributors debate whether these productions enhance or undercut the subtle feminism that austen promoted in her novels from persuasion to pride and prejudice from the three emmas including clueless to sense and sensibility these films succeed because they flatter our intelligence and education and they have as much to tell us about ourselves as they do about the world of jane austen this second edition includes a new chapter on the recent film version of mansfield park
