the debate about when the middle ages ended and the modern era began has long been a staple of the historical literature in order to further this debate and illuminate the implications of a longue durée approach to the history of the reformation this collection offers a selection of essays that address the medieval modern divide covering a broad range of topics encompassing legal social cultural theological and political history the volume asks fundamental questions about how we regard history and what historians can learn from colleagues working in other fields that may not at first glance appear to offer any obvious links by focussing on the concept of the medieval modern divide in particular the relation between the middle ages and the reformation each essay examines how a medievalist deals with a specific topic or issue that is also attracting the attention of reformation scholars in so doing it underlines the fact that both medievalists and modernists are often involved in bridging the medieval modern divide but are inclined to construct parallel bridges that end between the two starting points but do not necessarily meet as a result the volume challenges assumptions about the strict periodization of history and suggest that a more flexible approach will yield interesting historical insights the author sees the history of western science as the history of a vision and an argument initiated by the ancient greeks in their search for principles at once of nature and of argument itself this scientific vision explored and controlled by argument and the diversification of both vision and argument by scientific experience and by interaction with the wider contexts of intellectual culture constitute the long history of european scientific thought underlying that development have been specific commitments to conceptions of nature and of science and its intellectual and moral assumptions accompanied by a recurrent critique their diversification has generated a series of different styles of scientific thinking and of making theoretical and practical decisions which the work describes rich collisions and fresh perspectives illuminate the profound continuities of thought and practice that have marked western art through the ages this groundbreaking study offers a radical new reading of art since the middle ages moving across the familiar period lines set out in conventional histories alexander nagel explores the deep connections between modern and premodern art to reveal the underlying patterns and ideas traversing centuries of artistic practice in a series of episodic chapters he reconsiders from an innovative double perspective a number of key issues in the history of art from iconoclasm and idolatry to installation and the museum as institution he shows how the central tenets of modernism serial production site specificity collage the readymade and the questioning of the nature of art and authorship were all features of earlier times before modernity revived by recent generations nagel examines among other things the importance of medieval cathedrals to the 1920s bauhaus movement the parallels between renaissance altarpieces and modern preoccupations with surface and structure the relevance of byzantine models to minimalist artists the affinities between ancient holy sites and early earthworks and the similarities between the sacred relic and the modern readymade alongside the work of leading 20th century medievalist writers such as Walter Benjamin, Marshall McLuhan, Leo Steinberg, and Duchamp. Kurt Schwitters, Robert Rauschenberg, and Damien Hirst. The effect of these encounters goes in two directions at once: each age offers new insights into the other, deepening our understanding of both past and present and providing a new set of reference points that reframe the history of art itself.
