Rethinking Climate Change, Conflict and Security 2017-10-02 is global climate change likely to become a significant source of violent conflict and should it therefore be seen as a national security challenge most northern governments militaries think tanks and ngos believe so as do many academic researchers on the grounds that increased temperatures changing precipitation patterns and rising sea levels will worsen existing social stresses especially within poor societies and marginal communities across africa and asia this book argues otherwise the first collection of its kind it brings together leading scholars of anthropology geography development studies and international relations to provide a series of critical analyses of mainstream thinking on the climate security nexus it shows how policy discourse on climate conflict consistently misrepresents the causes of violence especially by obscuring its core political dimensions it demonstrates that quantitative research provides a flawed basis for understanding climate conflict linkages it argues that climate security discourse is in hoc with a range of questionable military authoritarian and developmental agendas and it reveals that the greening of global capitalism is already having violent consequences across the global south climate change the book argues does indeed have serious conflict and security implications but these are quite different from how they are usually imagined this book was published as a special issue of geopolitics in this book the author proposes the existence of a continuum of aggressive marginalisation phenomena ranging from the unfortunately commonplace experiences of prejudice discrimination and bullying behaviour through to genocide attempts made by researchers and practitioners to understand counter and prevent bullying behaviour are reviewed a key finding has been that the success that has been accrued has been limited especially when the case of those who belong to so called minority groups who are often the target of prejudice outside of the school gates is considered it is suggested that future anti bullying actions should meaningfully engage with prejudice as an underlying factor after a critical consideration of the various psychological understandings of aggression aggressive behaviour and marginalisation has been made the author goes on to introduce and assess an eight stage model of physical genocide based primarily on insights from social cognitive psychology and exemplified in the history of the lakota cheyenne campaign 1864 1890 this is followed by a consideration of the cultural genocide levelled against indigenous peoples exemplified in the sami people in norway and indigenous peoples of north america as implemented through the actions of educational systems and educators the book ends with some suggestions being made regarding our potential to address the one and other mindset that is proposed as underlying the continuum of aggressive marginalisation phenomena through the
