excerpt from the arms of the scottish bishoprics the following chapters appeared in the pages of the scottish chronicle in 1915 and 1916 and it is owing to the courtesy of the proprietor and editor that they are now republished in book form their original publication in the pages of a church newspaper will explain something of the lines on which the book is fashioned the articles were written to explain and to describe the origin and development of the armorial bearings of the ancient dioceses of scotland these coats of arms are and have been more or less continuously used by the scottish episcopal church since they came into use in the middle of the 17th century though whether the disestablished church has a right to their use or not is a vexed question fox davis holds that the church of ireland and the episcopal church in scotland lost their diocesan coats of arms on disestablishment and that the welsh church will suffer the same loss when the disestablishment act comes into operation public arms stevenson on the other hand says with regard to the scottish diocesan arms that it has never been actually decided who if anybody has the right to use them heraldry in scotland it was therefore considered best to take for granted the customary use of the arms whether right or wrong by the episcopal church and to explain and describe their development about the publisher forgotten books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books find more at forgottenbooks.com this book is a reproduction of an important historical work forgotten books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy in rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition we do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works
