who we most deeply are is mirrored in our artistic work our need for mirroring simultaneously attracts us to and repels us from our creative callings and relationships it is one of life s great dilemmas artist s block and lover s block flow from the same pool often we fear deeply the very thing needed to create original art to experience intimate relationships and to live authentic lives we are frightened by the impulse to be fully revealed to ourselves and to others as this most often entails exposing the unacceptable shadowy aspects of our humanity and risking rejection mirrors in all their manifold guises permit us to safely see and experience ourselves in reflection and become better acquainted with the rejected ostracized aspects of our personalities creative work is one of the few places where we can truly express and witness lost aspects of our authentic selves within us a treasure beckons this is what we spend our lives pursuing what slows and distracts us is not the object we long for but where we search to find this precious gem we must eventually return to our own creative spirits here is an excerpt if you like where collier goes with this you ll like the rest of the book i believe we make a mistake if we think that modern man is a rational creature while it is a mark of primitive man to respond directly to the non logical and less rationally defensible images projected by the psyche similar primitive or elemental responses lurk behind the civilized faced of which we are so proud for example we might be somewhat amused by the cave dweller s belief that because he possessed the image of an animal he had gained some power capable of controlling the creature s life but do we not believe something of the sort when we cherish the photograph of someone important to us and think carefully as to where it should be placed where is the place we can contemplate it the most effectively can we honestly say that in possessing this image of a person we do not feel that some intangible link exists between us and them and could we willfully and with passion deface the photograph without the irrational thought overtaking us that we had done some harm to the relationship and to the person concerned customer review amazon com
