Ken Follett wrote his first international bestseller Eye of the Needle when he was 25 years old. He has since been one of the most consistent international best-selling authors with approximately 130 million copies of his books sold worldwide. His manifold influences on the thriller genre include the pioneering use of strong female characters in espionage stories and the development of the historical thriller as a new form of novel exemplified by Winter of the World (2012). This book is an investigation of Follett's development as an author and of the craft of writing and the negotiation of serious versus popular literary value from his earliest short stories and screenplays through his mature thrillers and entertainment fiction. Unpublished materials are also considered, including his notes, business and personal correspondence, unpublished drafts, journal entries, and outlines. Follett's dramatic shift to writing historical fiction may be his most enduring legacy.

Based on empirical studies of European energy and environmental policies, this book suggests that in combination these two policy fields form a consensus in the EU which might also become the basis for a new European ideology, namely European sustainability. It asks why an environmental conscience has grown since the late 1960s in the industrialised world and shows that whilst there is undeniable environmental degradation during this time and that a European environmental conscience has mainly developed through successive steps of European integration in energy policy, in this connection between energy and the environment we find one driver for European integration and indeed European identity. If sustainability should become a European ideology, it will substantially influence the way future Europeans will live. This book will be of key interest to scholars and students of European studies, international relations, political science, history, economics, sustainability studies, environmental and energy policies in Europe.
