the author should not disappear into her own work says christa wolf but should stand up and be counted in this series of interviews and conversations spanning more than a decade christa wolf does precisely that here one of the greatest contemporary novelists discusses the origins of an inspirations for her best known works often taking as her starting point events from the past her novels she explains remain fictions of the present whether her concern is to reassess the experiences of growing up in nazi germany as in a model childhood or to attempt to trace the roots of the contradictions in which our civilisation is now trapped as in cassandra these conversations however take her far beyond the purely literary she talks openly about what it means to be both a writer and a woman in east germany today and concludes that literature is no longer territorially defined we are not so much divided by boundaries between east and west as united in our common experience of highly organized patriarchal society she says which has brought us to the verge of annihilation it is the author's voice according to christa wolf which provides the fourth dimension of modern prose in these pages her own voice emerges more loudly and clearly than ever
