A Theory of Human Action

the present paper is an attempt to formulate a positive theory of motivation which will satisfy these theoretical demands and at the same time conform to the known facts clinical and observational as well as experimental it derives most directly however from clinical experience this theory is i think in the functionalist tradition of james and dewey and is fused with the holism of wertheimer goldstein and gestalt psychology and with the dynamicism of freud and adler this fusion or synthesis may arbitrarily be called a general dynamic theory it is far easier to perceive and to criticize the aspects in motivation theory than to remedy them mostly this is because of the very serious lack of sound data in this area i conceive this lack of sound facts to be due primarily to the absence of a valid theory of motivation the present theory then must be considered to be a suggested program or framework for future research and must stand or fall not so much on facts available or evidence presented as upon researches to be done researches suggested perhaps by the questions raised in this paper us psychologist abraham h maslow s a theory of human motivation is a classic of psychological research that helped change the field for good like many field changing thinkers maslow was not just a talented researcher he was also a creative thinker able to see things from a new perspective and show them in a different light at a time when psychology was dominated by two major schools of thought maslow was able to forge a new third paradigm that remains influential today sigmund freud s psychoanalysis had developed the idea of understanding the mind through dialogue between patient and analyst the behaviorism of ivan pavlov and john watson had focused on comprehending the mind through behaviors that could be measured trained and changed maslow however generated new ideas forging what he called positive or humanistic psychology his argument was that humans are psychologically motivated by a series of hierarchical needs starting with the most essential first maslow thought it important for the advancement of psychology to identify group and rank these needs in terms of priority his belief in the value of this third way was important in leading those who studied psychology to redefine the discipline and so see it in new ways human beings are hierarchical animals always and everywhere people have developed social ranking systems these differ dramatically in how they are organized but the underlying causal mechanisms that create and sustain them are the same whether they are on the top or bottom of the heap people attempt to be superior to some other persons or group this is the root of melvyn l fein s thesis presented in human hierarchies a general theory fein traces the development of changes from hunter gatherer times to our own techno commercial society in moving from small to large communities humans went from face to face contests for superiority to more anonymous and symbolic ones societies evolved from hunting bands where the parties knew each other through big men societies chieftainships agrarian empires patronage chains caste societies estate systems and market oriented democracies where once small groupings were organized primarily by strong forces such as personal relationships the now standard large groupings are more dependent on weaker forces such as those provided by social roles bureaucracies and professional roles have become prominent bureaucracies allow large scale organizations to maintain control of people by limiting the potential destructiveness of unregulated tests of strength and by clarifying chains of command their rigidity and unresponsiveness requires that they be supplemented by professional roles at the same time a proliferation of self motivated experts delegate authority downward thereby introducing a more flexible decentralization this analysis is a unique and significant advance in both the sociology and anthropology of stratification among humans
