the christian frame of mind reason order and openness in theology and natural science is an exhilarating exploration by one of this century s premier theologians of the relationship between science and theology this collection of essays which focuses on themes central to thomas f torrance s lifelong work of integrating judea christian theology and natural science illuminates the distinctive contribution of the christian frame of mind to human life and thought particularly in the rise of modern science arguing to close the gap between theological and natural science erroneously opened by the narrow minded rationalism of the enlightenment dr torrance builds upon the work of scientists such as james clerk maxwell albert einstein and michael polanyi in promoting dialogue between the two disciplines the resultant conversation is a brilliant and stirring analysis of common ground in scientific and theological inquiry torrance discards a dualist separation for a unitary understanding of reality in which the invisible guides the interpretation of the visible as scientist and theologian alike adopt self critical openness and the auditive mode of inquiry in response to the pressing questions of their task dr torrance urges this unitary understanding of the intelligibility of the universe as a shared goal of science and theology his vision of a foundational convergence between them where the boundary points of contingent reality find their reference in the transcendent uncreated reality of the word of god is breathtaking in beauty and scope the introduction by dr w jim neidhardt physics professor at the new jersey institute of technology provides a lucid summary of key themes in torrance s lifelong integrative work included is a foldout of diagrams of images of the difficult page is page number one we all know the feeling a book looks interesting inspiring beneficial even then something happens and we put it down that something is a distraction the antidote is motivation while our lives appear to be moving at an ever increasing pace we risk an experience known as the vertigo of modernism with so much happening all around amidst the dizzying pace of progress and change how do we keep our focus and maintain our motivation to answer that question frames of mind examines the recent psychological theory of growth and fixed mind sets and shows how it corresponds to the ancient teachings of kabbalah as we struggle to gain our foothold in the world of the present we need to reframe our modern day challenges and obstacles in light of the experiences of the past but even as we hold onto the past we also need to set our sights on the future like a sprinter or archer who first withdraws in order to spring forward we withdraw to the ancient source of motivation in order to propel ourselves farther forward in synthesizing ancient and modern ideas frames of mind demonstrates how we can reach our goals faster and arrive closer to the target than we
