excerpt from finding a way out an autobiography the story that is recorded here is written only at the repeated and urgent solicitation of those of my friends who have known me best and have insisted that the telling of it would serve a useful purpose especially at this time in helping to a clearer understanding of the hopes and aspirations of my own people and the difficulties which they have overcome in making the progress of the last fifty years which has been so frequently described as the most remarkable of any race in so short a time there is no other justification i am sure for telling a story that is so simple and lacks so many of those elements which compel interest and hold attention about the publisher forgotten books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books find more at forgottenbooks.com this book is a reproduction of an important historical work forgotten books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy in rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition we do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works taking a fresh look at the state of autobiography as a genre the phenomenology of autobiography making it real takes a deep dive into the experience of the reader dr schmitt argues that current trends in the field of life writing have taken the focus away from the text and the initial purpose of autobiography as a means for the author to communicate with a reader and narrate an experience the study puts autobiography back into a communicational context and putting forth the notion that one of the reasons why life writing can so often be aesthetically unsatisfactory or difficult to distinguish from novels is because it should not be considered as a literary genre but as a modality with radically different rules and means of evaluation in other words not only is autobiography radically different from fiction due to its referentiality but first and foremost it should be read differently
