undergraduate and postgraduate students taking advanced strategy modules and practitioners alike driven by the promise of prosperity and opportunity on the frontier thousands of men and women traveled west in the mid 1800s to forge a new life accompanying them were their children wide eyed and excited about the adventures that awaited them as they headed toward the setting sun little did they know how treacherous and grueling the trip would be the toil and danger of overland travel forced parents to depend on their children to assist in their ultimate survival girls were called upon to help cook set up and break camp and mind younger siblings boys were called upon to help drive the wagons herd the oxen and horses assist with wagon repairs and guard the camp at night even with their endless chores many pioneer boys and girls found time to record the details of their journeys in letters and diaries this collection of short episodes from the lives of these children on the trail offers fresh perspectives on the experience since the beginning of the reservation era the bitter conflict between indians and non indians over water rights was largely confined to the courtroom but in the 1980s the federal government began to emphasize negotiated settlements over lawsuits and the settlements are changing water rights in fundamental ways not only for tribes but also for non indian communities that share scarce water resources with indians in native waters daniel mccool describes the dramatic impact these settlements are having both on indian country and on the american west as a whole viewing the settlements as a second treaty era he considers whether they will guarantee the water future of reservations nor like treaties of old will require tribes to surrender vast resources in order to retain a small part of their traditional homelands as one tribal official observed it s like your neighbors have been stealing your horses for many years and now we have to sit down and decide how many of those horses they get to keep unlike technical studies of water policy mccool s book is a readable account that shows us real people attempting to end real disputes that have been going on for decades he discusses specific water settlements using a combination of approaches from personal testimony to traditional social science methodology to capture the richness complexity and human texture of the water rights conflict by explaining the processes and outcomes in plain language and grounding his presentation in relevant explanations of indian culture he conveys the complexity of the settlements for readers from a wide range of disciplines native waters illustrates how america is coming to grips with an issue that has long been characterized by injustice and conflict seeking to enhance our understanding of the settlements in the hope that this understanding will lead to better settlements for all parties as one of the first assessments of a policy that will have a pervasive impact for centuries to come it shows that how we resolve indian water claims tells us a great deal about who we are as a nation and how we confront difficult issues involving race culture and the environment reprint of the original first published in 1866 even decades after the grassy knoll the dog faced man from dallas is hounded by the betrayal that forever Practicing Strategy 1866 negotiating family responsibilities provides a major new insight into contemporary family life particularly kin relationships outside the nuclear family while many people believe that the real meaning of family has shrunk to the nuclear family household there is considerable evidence to suggest that relationships with the wider kin group remain an important part of most people s lives based on the findings of a major study of kinship and including lively verbatim accounts of conversations with family members concepts of responsibility and obligation within family life are examined and the authors expand theories on the nature of assistance within families and argue that it is negotiated over time rather than given automatically
