reflection in writing studies is now entering a third generation dating from the 1970s the first generation of reflection focused on identifying and describing internal cognitive processes assumed to be part of composing the second generation operating in both classroom and assessment scenes in the 1990s developed mechanisms for externalizing reflection making it visible and thus explicitly available to help writers now a third generation of work in reflection is emerging as mapped by the contributors to a rhetoric of reflection this iteration of research and practice is taking up new questions in new sites of activity and with new theories it comprises attention to transfer of writing knowledge and practice teaching and assessment portfolios linguistic and cultural difference and various media including print and digital it conceptualizes conversation as a primary reflective medium both inside and outside the classroom and for individuals and collectives and articulates the role that different genres play in hosting reflection perhaps most important in the work of this third generation is the identification and increasing appreciation of the epistemic value of reflection of its ability to help make new meanings and of its rhetorical power for both scholars and students contributors anne beaufort kara taczak liane robertson michael neal heather ostman cathy leaker bruce horner asao b inoue tyler richmond j elizabeth clark naomi silver christina russell mcdonald pamela flash kevin roozen jeff sommers doug hesse

what is more paradoxically democratic than a people exercising their vote against the harbingers of the rule of law and democracy what happens when the will of the people and the rule of law are at odds some commentators note that the presence of illiberal political movements in the public arena of many western countries demonstrates that their democracy is so inclusive and alive that it comprehends and countenances even undemocratic forces and political agendas but what if on the contrary these were the signs of the deconsolidation of democracy instead of its good health what if democratically elected regimes were to ignore constitutional principles representing the rule of law and the limits of their power with contributions from judges and scholars from different backgrounds and nationalities this book explores the framework in which this tension currently takes place in several western countries by focusing on four key themes the rule of law presenting a historical and theoretical reconstruction of the evolution of the rule of law the people dealing with a set of problems around the notion of people and the forces claiming to represent their voice democracy and its enemies tackling a variety of phenomena impacting on the traditional democratic balance of powers and institutional order elected and non elected focusing on the juxtaposition between judges and more generally non representative bodies and the people s representation
