Understanding Kids, Play, and Interactive Design 2019-09-23 educational sociologists have paid relatively little attention to children in middle childhood ages 6 to 12 whereas developmental psychologists have emphasized factors internal to the child much more than the social contexts in explaining children s development children schools and inequality redresses that imbalance it examines elementary school outcomes e g test scores grades retention rates in light of the socioeconomic variation in schools and neighborhoods the organizational patterns across elementary schools and the ways in which family structure intersects with children s school performance adding data from the baltimore beginning school study to information culled from the fields of sociology child development and education this book suggests why the gap between the school achievement of poor children and those who are better off has been so difficult to close doris enwistle karl alexander and linda olson show why the first grade transition how children negotiate entry into full time schooling is a crucial period they also show that events over that time have repercussions that echo throughout children s entire school careers currently the only study of this life transition to cover a comprehensive sample and to suggest straightforward remedies for urban schools children schools and inequality can inform educators practitioners and policymakers as well as researchers in the sociology of education and child development The Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention Act--S. 3148 and S. 821 1973 childly language explores how attitudes and cultural assumptions about children and childhood are revealed in contemporary english it addresses such questions as how is concern for children s safety and welfare reflected in the vocabulary and grammar of contemporary english and when we say that an adult is being childish what are we saying about the characteristics of children

Rockwood and Wilkins' Fractures in Children 2010 we use the 1988 psid to study the effects of income and wealth on transfers of money and time between individuals and their parents as well as the effects of incomes of other relatives on these flows we relate the relative incomes of parents and parents in law to transfer amounts given and received by married couples we also study how the relative incomes of divorced parents influence transfers we find that money transfers tend to reduce inequality in household incomes and that time transfers are only weakly related to income differences richer siblings give more to parents and receive less among parents and parents in law the richer set of parents is more likely to give money and less likely to receive money the same is true of divorced parents in contrast to the implications of simple exchange models of transfers there is little evidence in the cross section or in the analysis using siblings that parental income or wealth raises time transfers from children or that time transfers are exchanged for money transfers in the cross section and among siblings the strong negative relationship between time transfers and distance from parents is not associated with a strong negative relationship between distance and money transfers we discuss the implications of our results for alternative models of transfers
