in 1872 a woman known only as an earnest englishwoman published a letter titled are women animals in which she protested against the fact that women were not treated as fully human in fact their status was worse than that of animals regulations prohibiting cruelty against dogs horses and cattle were significantly more punitive than laws against cruelty to women the earnest englishwoman s heartfelt cry was for women to become animal in order to gain the status that they were denied on the grounds that they were not part of mankind in this fascinating account joanna bourke addresses the profound question of what it means to be human rather than animal how are people excluded from political personhood how does one become entitled to rights the distinction between the two concepts is a blurred line permanently under construction if the earnest englishwoman had been capable of looking 100 years into the future she might have wondered about the human status of chimeras or the ethics of stem cell research political disclosures and scientific advances have been re locating the human animal border at an alarming speed in this meticulously researched illuminating book bourke explores the legacy of more than two centuries and looks forward into what the future might hold for humans women and animals

Investigating Identities: Questions of Identity in Contemporary International Crime Fiction is one of the relatively few books to date which adopts a comparative approach to the study of the genre this collection of twenty essays by international scholars examining crime fiction production from over a dozen countries confirms that a comparative approach can both shed light on processes of adaptation and appropriation of the genre within specific national regional or local contexts and also uncover similarities between the works of authors from very different areas contributors explore discourse concerning national and historical memory language race ethnicity culture and gender and examine how identity is affirmed and challenged in the crime genre today they reveal a growing tendency towards hybridization and postmodern experimentation and increasing engagement with philosophical enquiry into the epistemological dimensions of investigation throughout the notion of stable identities is subject to scrutiny while each essay in itself is a valuable addition to existing criticism on the genre all the chapters mutually inform and complement each other in fascinating and often unexpected ways this volume makes an important contribution to the growing field of crime fiction studies and to ongoing debates on questions of identity it will therefore be of special interest to students and scholars of the crime genre identity studies and comparative literature it will also appeal to all who enjoy reading contemporary crime fiction
