What do the artistic works of acclaimed author Tim Winton and eminent Ngarinyin lawman Bungul David Mowaljarlai have in common according to Hannah Rachel Bell? They both reflect a sacred relationship with the natural world, the biological imperative of a male rite of passage, an emergent urban tribalism, and the fundamental role of story in the transmission of cultural knowledge. In Bell's four-decade friendship with Mowaljarlai, she had to confront the cultural assumptions that sculpted her way of seeing the journey. Was life-changing when she returned to teaching in 2001, Tim Winton's novels featured in the curriculum, she recognised an eerie familiarity and thought Winton must have been influenced by traditional elders to express such an Indigenous perspective. She wrote to him; this resulted in 4 years of correspondence and an excavation of converging world views exposed through personal memoir, letters, paintings, and conversations, and culminating in Storymen.

Raising Readers

2004-05-31

In recent years, Australian literature has experienced a revival of interest both domestically and internationally. The increasing prominence of work by writers like Christos Tsiolkas, heightened through television and film adaptation, as well as the award of major international prizes to writers like Richard Flanagan, and the development of new high-profile prizes like the Stella Prize, have all reinvigorated interest in Australian literature both at home and abroad. This companion emerges as a part of that reinvigoration, considering anew the history and development of Australian literature and its key themes, as well as tracing the transition of the field through those critical debates. It considers works of Australian literature on their own terms, as well as positioning them in their critical and historical context, and their ethical and interactive position in the public and private spheres. With an emphasis on literature's responsibilities, this book claims Australian literary studies as a field uniquely positioned to expose the ways in which literature engages with, produces, and is produced by its context, provoking a critical re-evaluation of the concept of the relationship between national literatures, cultures, and histories, and the social function of literary texts.

the theme of the planetary clock is the representation of time in postmodern culture and the way temporality as a global phenomenon manifests itself differently across an antipodean axis to trace postmodernism in an expansive spatial and temporal arc from its formal experimentation in the 1960s to environmental concerns in the twenty first century is to describe a richer and more complex version of this cultural phenomenon exploring different scales of time from a southern hemisphere perspective with a special emphasis on issues of indigeneity and the anthropocene the planetary clock offers a wide ranging revisionist account of postmodernism reinterpreting literature film music and visual art of the post 1960 period within a planetary framework by bringing the culture of australia and new zealand into dialogue with other western narratives it suggests how an antipodean impulse involving the transposition of the world into different spatial and temporal dimensions has long been an integral if generally occluded aspect of postmodernism taking its title from a florentine clock designed in 1510 to measure worldly time alongside the rotation of the planets the planetary clock ranges across well known american postmodernists john barth toni morrison to more recent science fiction writers octavia butler richard powers while bringing the us tradition into juxtaposition with both its english philip larkin ian mcewan and australian les murray alexis wright counterparts by aligning cultural postmodernism with music messiaen ligeti birtwistle the visual arts hockney blackman fiona hall and cinema rohmer haneke tarantino this volume enlarges our understanding of global postmodernism for the twenty first century
