2002-05

Amazon.com CEO Jeff Bezos announced that the company would be moving its headquarters to the city of Seattle, Washington, in 2002. The move was a significant event for the city, as it marked the arrival of one of the world's largest and most successful technology companies. Bezos, who founded Amazon in 1994, had spent the previous several years building the company into a global e-commerce giant. The decision to relocate to Seattle was based on a number of factors, including the city's strong presence in the technology industry, its favorable business environment, and its proximity to the company's existing operations. The move was completed in 2002, and Amazon has since become a major employer in the city, contributing significantly to its economic growth.

2006-10-20

In 2006, Amazon.com announced that it had acquired the online video service Amazon.com Video. The acquisition was a major move for the company, as it allowed it to expand its offerings beyond e-commerce and into the entertainment industry. Amazon.com Video was a subscription-based service that provided users with access to a large library of movies and TV shows. The acquisition was completed in 2006, and Amazon.com Video has since become a major player in the market. The move was a significant event for the company, as it marked its entry into a new and highly competitive industry. Amazon.com Video has since grown into a major part of Amazon's business, and it has become a key driver of the company's growth.
